OME AND CHINA AFFAIRS

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT. LONDON, 29th June, 1877 ENGLAND AND THE WAR. The lending topic of conversation is the pub lication of a letter from Lord Derby to Count Schouvaloff, dated the 16th ultime, and the reply of Prince Gortschakoff, dated fourteen days thereafter. These dispatches, being written in extremely guarded diplomatic language, must be read between the lines ero their great import can be comprehended. . It is apparent that all personal communication between Lord Derby and the Count, or between our Ambassador at St. Petersburg and the Prince, is at an end, inasmuch as the conjents of the disputches form special subjects under ordinary circumstances for viva race discussions. It was said some time ago that Lord Derby placed so little réliance on the veracity of Russia that he had determined to avoid, as much as possible, any further personal communications, and here we have a peculiar corroboration of the rumour. A Roman paper of good repute states that the Prince of Wales. when in Paris, expressed a private opinion that the question with England of war was one merely of weeks, and I really believe the statement to

At the time Lord Derby wrote to the Count, the latter was on the eve of departing for St. Petersbarg, and was requested by his Lordship, by way of a dictum, to communicate the letter as a message to his government. The fair interpretation of this letter or message is as follows:--The British Government repudiates the Russian pretext for war, that is to say, the real pretext is aggrandisement, and not the protection of Ottoman Christians: in pursuit of the war England is unable to assist the Turks because of the Bulparian atrocities, but, nevertheless, Russia cannot be allowed to injure British interests. not popular, at least with the majority of the which stand outside the question at issue, namely the protection of Ottoman Christians. These interests are then enumerated in a curt and dicstorial manner. 1st. Egypt and the Canal shall not be occupied nor obstructed; 2nd, Constantinople shall not be transferred nor held-by any Power whatever except Tarkey: 3rd, the navigation of the Dardanelles and the Bosphorus other nationality than Ottoman; 4th, Russia shall not be allowed to acquire territory which may facilitate her advance to the Persian which of course means Armenia, or, I should suppose, any part theroof. The letter winds up with the reminder that all these requirements of England are in precise accordance with the Czar's voluntary avowal to the British ambassador last November at Livadia which. seeing with what contempt and derision Lord Beaconsfield treated that avowal in his celebrated Guildhall speech, is certainly something like stroking the hair the wrong way. Prince Gortschakoff's reply is a masterpiece of evasion and ruffled dignity. He magnanimonsly admits England's great interest in Egypt and the Canal, and removes that question from the category of the war, but on the other three points he evidently, joins issue, merely seeking Constantinople he maintains to be a European and not an English awistion, and that no European Power whatever can be permitted to hold it he does not say occupy—and from what follows he evidently means Russian occupation on behalf of it for Russian ships of war, and as for the route to India, he plays off a little irony by He was fined $2, or seven days' imprisonment. stating it will entirely depend on the bona fide neutrality of England during the war. It will thus be seen that the relations of the two countries are absolutely on the hair-trigger. The solution I imagine to be this. Should the Russians make good their footing in Bulgaria, England will occupy Constantinople and the Bosphorus until a European conference shall settle matters to her satisfaction, and this is the project which Lord Beaconsfield has all along deemed inevitable, and for the advocacy of which Apo, a boatman, with stealing a pair of trowsers, he has been so well rated by the pro-Russian rests," with particular reference to Egypt. The judge to whom his case was referred was a military officer (a general), who had a pile of documents, the records of various offences, the latest of which was placed at -the bottom of the file, and as they were cleared away, one after another, the lowest document gradually mounted. My host, a few days before his case reached the summit (which was about once in three years), received from the general's secretary a notice that an adjudication was at hand, upon which a bribe was sent in according to arrangement, and the case was removed to the bottom of the pile.
